THE NATIONAL CENTENNIAL. Mr. Kelley, of Pa., from the Committee on the Centennial Celebration, offected a resolution requisiting the President of the United States to extend invitations on the part of the United States to other nations, asking them to sake part in such Centennial celebration.

Mr. Kelley and this action was necessary, because, sithough it was understood that foreign nations should be invited to participate, yet the President did not think he had sufficient nuthority under laws that had already been passed.

Mr. Hale, of Me., said he would be compelled to oppose this resolution if it was understood that it would afterwards be used as an argument why we should make an appropriation for this celebra-penase. The United creases are greated that he had a provise which would obviate the difficulty in the initial of many with regard to voting for the bill. His provise which would obviate the difficulty in the initial of many with regard to voting for the bill. His provise was to declare that the architeline was mot to be considered as a national affair, and thus the General Gorenzament would not be assemblited to any expense.

Mr. Easent, Iowa, suggested that he had a provise which would obviate the difficulty in the initial state of the bill. His provise was to declare that the exhibition was committed to any expense.

Mr. Easent, Iowa, suggested that he had a provise which was unpaid, as a part of his estate, and thus the world to be considered as a national affair, and thus the provise was expense.
